

Popular Publications Source Locator

Books / eBooks	Magazines / Journals	Newspapers
To borrow for free: Your local public library catalog such as the Columbus Metropolitan Library catalog To buy: An online bookseller like Amazon or Barnes and Noble. Note: E-Books are included in both library catalogs and online bookseller sites.	To find articles in a magazine that pertain to a topic of interest: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Use a search engine like Google Note: Articles will be mixed in with websites, blogs and all other sorts of resources. There is no good way to filter out resources that are not popular magazine articles.</li> <li>Use an article database like Academic Search Complete. Note: This and other databases like it usually have to be accessed through your public or academic library card. Popular and scholarly articles will be retrieved together, but it is possible to filter out scholarly articles.</li> </ul> To read a current issue of a magazine, use Google to see if it is online. If not, popular magazines are carried by public libraries (for free access) or drug stores and bookstores for a fee.	There are dozens of ways to search for articles in newspapers. To search within a particular newspaper, try going to the online site of the newspaper and see if there is an option to search its archive. To search by topic for newspaper articles from the past, you should check with your public or academic librarian for help on where to look. It is helpful if you know these things: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>General time period (last 2 years or the 1800's)</li> <li>Geographic location (American newspapers or papers from other countries)</li> <li>The nature of what you need (related to a particular event, person, etc.)</li> </ul>
Conference Papers	Documentaries	Blogs
You will likely not find conference papers for popular events.	For Free: Use a public library catalog such as Columbus Metropolitan Library. Do a keyword search on your topic with the word "documentary" included. For instance: global warming documentary For a fee: Use a subscription service such as Netflix or Amazon Prime. Documentaries will be a category you can browse.	To find blogs to follow, use a blog searcher such as: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Blog Catalog</li> <li>BlogSearchEngine</li> </ul> To find blog posts on a particular topic: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>BlogSearchEngine</li> <li>Google</li> </ul> Note: Blog posts will be mixed in with articles, websites and other resources.
Websites	Online Video	Podcasts
Use a search engine such as Google or Bing.	Use Youtube or Vimeo.	Use iTunes.

Professional Publications Source Locator

Books / eBooks	Magazines / Journals	Newspapers
To borrow for free: An academic library catalog such as the OSU Library catalog. Each academic library has its own catalog, but a service like WorldCat or OhioLINK let you see what many libraries own simultaneously. Note: eBooks will be found in the catalog, just as print books are. However, many professional books are not published in e-reader format (such as Kindle), but on an e-reader available through a web browser. To buy: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Amazon</li> <li>• Publisher or society web sites</li> </ul>	There are numerous “trade” or “professional” magazines and journals that are directed towards professionals in a particular field. Often, these are published by trade organizations or associations. To identify titles: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Google Note: search as follows:</li> <li>• Magazines for scientists</li> <li>• Magazines for teachers, etc.</li> </ul> Visit the website of a known association or society to find out what magazine they publish To find articles by subject, use the instructions for popular magazines.	There are dozens of ways to search for articles in newspapers. To search within a particular newspaper, try going to the online site of the newspaper and see if there is an option to search its archive. To search by topic for newspaper articles from the past, you should check with your public or academic librarian for help on where to look. It is helpful if you know these things: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• General time period (last 2 years or the 1800’s)</li> <li>• Geographic location (American newspapers or papers from other countries)</li> <li>• The nature of what you need (related to a particular event, person, etc.)</li> </ul>
Conference Papers	Documentaries	Blogs
Generally these can be found through the same discipline-oriented database that you use to find scholarly articles. They can also be found through Google Scholar.	For Free: Use a library catalog such as the OSU Library catalog. Do a keyword search on your topic with the word “documentary” included. For instance: global warming documentary. For a fee: Use a subscription service such as Netflix or Amazon Prime. Documentaries will be a category you can browse.	To find blogs to follow, use a blog searcher such as: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Blog Catalog</li> <li>• BlogSearchEngine</li> </ul> To find blog posts on a particular topic: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• BlogSearchEngine</li> <li>• Google</li> </ul> Note: Blog posts will be mixed in with articles, websites and other resources.
Websites	Online Video	Podcasts
Use a search engine such as Google or Bing.	Use Youtube or Vimeo.	Use iTunes.

Scholarly Publications Source Locator

Books / eBooks	Magazines / Journals	Newspapers
To borrow for free: An academic library catalog such as the OSU Library catalog. Each academic library has its own catalog, but a service like WorldCat or OhioLINK let you see what many libraries own simultaneously. Note: eBooks will be found in the catalog, just as print books are. However, many professional books are not published in e-reader format (such as Kindle), but on an e-reader available through a web browser. To buy: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Amazon</li> <li>• Publisher, society, or institute web sites</li> </ul>	There are tens of thousands of scholarly journals and hundreds of databases available to search them. To search for free, use Google Scholar. Most journals and other databases will only be available to you for free through an academic library. A good general use database is Academic Search Complete. Most other databases are geared to a particular academic discipline (health, psychology, literature, etc.). To access these: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Check your academic library website.</li> <li>• Check your large public library.</li> <li>• Ask a librarian for help.</li> </ul>	There are dozens of ways to search for articles in newspapers. To search within a particular newspaper, try going to the online site of the newspaper and see if there is an option to search its archive. To search by topic for newspaper articles from the past, you should check with your public or academic librarian for help on where to look. It is helpful if you know these things: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• General time period (last 2 years or the 1800's)</li> <li>• Geographic location (American newspapers or papers from other countries)</li> <li>• The nature of what you need (related to a particular event, person, etc.)</li> </ul>
Conference Papers	Documentaries	Blogs
They can be found through Google Scholar. Generally these can also be found through the same discipline-oriented database that you use to find scholarly articles.	For Free: Use a library catalog such as the OSU Library catalog. Do a keyword search on your topic with the word "documentary" included. For instance: global warming documentary For a fee: Use a subscription service such as Netflix or Amazon Prime. Documentaries will be a category you can browse.	To find blogs to follow, use a blog searcher such as: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Blog Catalog</li> <li>• BlogSearchEngine</li> </ul> See if your favorite journal or society has a blog on their website. Search for known scholars in the field to see if they blog. To find blog posts on a particular topic: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• BlogSearchEngine</li> <li>• Google</li> </ul> Note: Blog posts will be mixed in with articles, websites and other resources.
Websites	Online Video	Podcasts
Use a search engine such as Google or Bing.	Use Youtube or Vimeo.	Use iTunes.